International Nurses Day: highlighting nursing resources at the Library

International Nurses Day is celebrated around the world every May 12th, the anniversary of Florence Nightingale's birth. We commemorate this important day by highlighting nursing resources at the Library.

These resources are available to all campus staff and students. No login is required when inside the RCH network; remote access requires an OpenAthens account.

In addition to the following resources, you can attend a Training session at the Library, or contact us for expert help with literature searching or finding information on your topic.

Key nursing databases

CINAHL (Ebsco): covers the nursing and allied health literature from 1982 to the present. Save your searches, and set up emailed auto-alerts. See our Fact Sheet no.15 for search tips, or watch a training video from Ebsco\*.

ClinicalKey (Elsevier): supports healthcare professionals and students with the latest evidence across specialties in a variety of formats, including full-text reference books and journals, point-of-care monographs, drug information, videos, practice guidelines, customised patient education handouts and more. See our Fact Sheet no.7 for search tips.

Nursing Database (Ovid): a comprehensive source for clinical, theoretical and management nursing and midwifery literature. It includes information from Journals@Ovid and Medline from 1946 to the present. See our Fact Sheet no.2 for search tips, or watch a training video from Ovid\*.

* These tutorials advise limiting your search to "Full text" to get a manageable number of results. This means your results will only contain references from journals that the Library subscribes to.

Apps for mobile devices

Use BrowZine or Read by QxMD mobile apps to stay up to date with new issues or register with individual journal titles to get new issue updates. See all mobile apps on the Library website.

AIHW latest releases

Cancer in adolescents and young adults in Australia 2023

This report is the third national report to present key data specific to cancer in adolescents and young adults (aged 15–24 years) in Australia. While cancer in young Australians is rare, it has a substantial social and economic impact on individuals, families and communities. Surveillance of this population is also important as adolescent and young adult cancer survivors are at an increased risk of developing a second cancer.

Eye health measures for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people 2022

Eye diseases and vision problems are the most common long-term health conditions reported by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians. This is the sixth annual report to update the Eye health measures for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. The measures cover the prevalence of eye health conditions, diagnosis and treatment services, the eye health workforce and outreach services.

The report provides an evidence base for monitoring changes in eye health amongst Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people over time, their access and use of eye health services, and for identifying gaps in service delivery. This report includes the latest available data against each measure.

Mental health

This site describes the activity and characteristics of Australia's health and social care services accessed by people with a mental illness. It includes mental health-related services provided by various levels of government, how much was spent, who provided the funds, where mental health services were delivered and data on the mental health workforce. Safety, quality and monitoring measures are also reported via the mental health-related indicators and the impact of COVID-19.
